

Household Emergency Plan

Why should I make an emergency plan?

Emergencies can impact anyone, sometimes with no notice. With good preparedness, you can mitigate the impact it has on your household whilst reducing the support you may require. It can also enable you to support the community. An emergency plan ensures you have the correct information available when it is most needed.

Where should I keep my emergency plan?

Your emergency plan needs to be stored in an easily accessible place. This could be near your front door or in your car. If possible, consider laminating the document to prevent it's potential to be damaged or affected by wear and tear.

What incidents could I face?

Some emergencies may require you to evacuate your home temporarily. Flooding, fires, gas explosions and bomb threats could require an evacuation. Other incidents may cause services to be unattainable in your own home (such as utility outages) or they could impact your ability to travel (adverse weather conditions such as snow).

Some incidents may happen suddenly, with no warning or preparation. Others may be predicted and take place over a period of time. Being prepared in advance will give you the ability to best respond regardless of warning.

What are the potential emergencies?

Discuss with your household what potential emergencies and dangers you could face. What actions can you take in advance and what actions would you take in response?

Emergency action plan speed sheet

When an incident occurs, follow these steps for an effective household response. Also think about which steps are bespoke to you.

Action		Done
Notify key emergency services about the incident that has taken place and whether there is risk to life.
Identify a safe location for you and your household. This may be at home or at one of the designated emergency meeting places listed below.
If required to evacuate, and if possible, ensure all key utility points are turned off.
Water	Location:
Electric	Location:
Gas	Location:
Once utility points are turned off, you and your household (including pets) should collect your grab bag (see page 5) and evacuate your property ensuring friends and family are aware of where you are going. If you have time, pack a bag for the evacuation - you may be required to evacuate for longer than you expect!
Contact your insurance provider so they can provide the support that you are entitled to in your policy. This may include temporary accommodation.
If you require further information, contact responding agencies, review news outlets, social media or listen to the radio.
Undertake any further actions required. Ensure family and friends are aware of these actions if they are affecting your location or response plan.

Emergency meeting places

During an emergency, your household may not necessarily all be together and responding at the same location. It is recommended you identify certain locations for you and your household to meet if you needed to reunite. If your household has functional needs, additional disability requirements or pets, you will need to consider this when choosing a location.

Type of meeting place	Location
In your neighbourhood Dependent upon the area required to evacuate, this could be somewhere near your house where you will meet if you have to leave your home urgently. This could be a big tree, the end of your garden, a neighbour's house etc.
Outside your neighbourhood This is a location where you and your household can meet within your local area if something was to occur, and you were not able to get back to your home. This could be a local shop, community centre, place of worship or a family friend's home.
Outside your town or city If you are unable to access the above two locations due to the emergency, you should identify a location further away to meet at. This could be a relative or family friend's house. Make sure your household know both the location and how they would travel there.

Household members

Use this space to list the members of your household and their contact details. This could help you reconnect with others if you don't have your mobile or the battery has run out.

Supporting your community

With an emergency plan in place, your household may be better prepared to evacuate in an incident than those living around you. You may be able to assist elderly or vulnerable people who need additional support. Furthermore, you may have relatives or family friends living in the close area that may rely on your support. List their details here:
